

“The snowy peaks of the North have invited us to come to do the Pagamentos and help unify the spiritual connection”.

The Mamos of La Sierra Nevada de Santa Marta, representatives of the Kaggabba Nation in Colombia, also known as the Kogi, have requested to travel to the Arctic North starting with Greenland and Iceland this year - as part of a long-term commitment to offering Pagamentos, Earth Payments, to the planet's natural sites.

The Mamos have been instructed to come to the Arctic North offering traditional earth payments to Northern natural Sacred Sites, to support the balancing of the elements which currently are strongly impacting Climate Change events. They bring an important message to the People of the North facing climate change impact.
